

Different types of information:

➔ Operational information (Day- to – Day tasks and processes)

- i) HR manages employee- related tasks: recruiting, interviewing, attendance issues, performance appraisal, target allocation.
- ii) HR maintains employee files, leave records, attendance and absent reports.
- iii) Every employee has a reporting boss, have to give reports of the working process to him.
- iv) KPI (Key Performance Indicator)- based performance scoring is used in job descriptions (JD) and for promoting or increment.
- v) Database tasks include saving employee records, designation history, and updates.
- vi) HR uses ORACLE software for database management.
- vii) Employees are provided with:
 - Snacks twice a day.
 - 1-hour leisure breaks
 - Prayer breaks
- viii) Security is ensured by:
 - Physical Manpower and security forces
 - CCTV at common/important junctions.
- ix) Supply chain departments handle Billing process, export and import logistics which is issued by HR.

➔ Tactical Information (Short /Medium-term planning & departmental strategies):

- i) HR departments operate at both unit level (AKS, AKT etc.) and head office, in order to coordinate together.
- ii) Head office HR collects and manages supply chain and production information from units.
- iii) HR assigns marks using performance tracking data for appraisals and promotions.
- iv) HR designs employee's lifestyle management for work-life balance.
- v) Billing reports and other operational data are compiled and submitted to head management for review.

➔ Strategic Information (Long-term goals and organizational direction)

- i) Centralized data flow helps align production with market demand.
- ii) Use of KPI-driven performance evaluation supports data-informed HR planning.
- iii) Continuous improvement in technology infrastructure to optimize overflow.
- iv) Study of product longevity contributes to R&D and competitive product development.

➔ Statutory Information (Legal and regulatory compliance):

- i) Accurate and updated records on:
 - Employee attendance.
 - Leave history.
 - Employment history.
- ii) Use of ORACLE and ITSM software ensures compliance with data management standards, and data integrity.
- iii) Security measures (manpower, CCTV cameras) help meet safety and compliance protocols.